

Wildscapes of

PANNA

Panna Tiger Reserve is one of India's remarkable tiger conservation success stories. Based in Madhya Pradesh, After losing its tiger population to poaching, Panna began a successful tiger reintroduction programme in 2009. Today, the reserve is home to a growing tiger population, along with leopards, sloth bears, dholes, deer and rich birdlife. With its scenic landscapes, Ken River and unique wildlife, Panna offers a rewarding experience for both wildlife lovers and photographers.

Join us on a journey through the breathtaking landscapes of Panna, where every trail carries the story of a remarkable tiger comeback. Once lost from these forests, the tigers of Panna were brought back through a pioneering conservation effort and have now reclaimed their place in the wild. Come explore this beautiful wilderness and witness the legendary lineage of Panna's tigers in the land where their story began again.
